Unlocked: The Front Door Secret to Where Artistry Meets Privacy

Midwest Art Glass gives homeowners new options for making grand entrances.

Fort Wayne, Ind. (May 7, 2009) -- It's been said that you can build a house, but you make a home. A home is an emotional place, where there are no strangers, where a neighborhood is a community of friends we consider as close as family. Never overlooked, the front door is a first impression and this greeting point of the home.

Now, whether it's adding value to the home or simply letting its beauty radiate from within, Midwest Art Glass is creating exquisite entryways with a new process for homeowners. Door Transformations is an inventive and remarkably easy way to renew, update and beautify the home's entryway.

With a flair of down home Midwestern ethics and impeccable style to match, Greg Scheffel and his team of artisans at Midwest Art Glass have created a myriad of entryway options for even the most discerning homeowners. With the ability to use the existing front door, the Door Transformations process can remove the door's midsection and replace it with the homeowner's choice of decorative glass, allowing natural light inside and instantly boosting the entryway's overall aesthetic appeal.

The Door Transformations service isn't limited to just the door, because experts like Scheffel can help create the grandest of entrances by enhancing the transom and sidelights as well, which can also boost a home's value and curb appeal.

"Offering our customers Door Transformations means that we're able to create a meeting point between artistry and privacy, something no other part of the home can do as beautifully," says Scheffel. "Because it's not just the door itself that we're helping to redesign, it's the whole entryway that we can positively affect."

Midwest Art Glass has been helping the Fort Wayne community build beautiful entrances to homes for over 20 years. Door Transformations underscores Scheffel's expertise, giving homes a personalized and architecturally-modern door at a remarkably affordable cost. At a time when homeowners across the country are seeking new options for home improvements, Midwest Art Glass is providing innovative solutions that can give the home a nice facelift, help improve value and generally satisfy the need for privacy with beauty.

"We're hoping that we can help make a home's beauty radiate from within," says Scheffel. "And vice versa too, there's nothing more comforting than a natural light reflected through stained glass colors that can paint a home's entryway."
